They have done so. It is still the case that there are key parts of the material that I'm going to be going to today which deals with the detailed figures to do with things like cost of capital and things like that. It is Sainsbury's confidential information and that is interleaved into the course of the evidence and therefore the questions I was going to be asking.

On that basis, sir, I think in practice --

MR JUSTICE BARLING: Is it not going to work.

MR COOK: It is not going to work. It is something where we would be sending people in and out on a fairly regular basis for what, I hope, will not be that long a cross-examination in any event, sir. My suggestion would be that it is all held in camera.

MR JUSTICE BARLING: Okay, I'm sorry if there's anybody here who is not in the confidentiality ring, except those who -- there may be some people who are entitled to stay for Sainsbury's, but not MasterCard's confidential information. So I would think this is going to mean that the whole of today's cross-examination then?

MR COOK: Indeed, sir, yes.

MR JUSTICE BARLING: So I'm very sorry.
